Decision: Major revisions required

The paper "Limitations of General Officials in Article 1 Number 20 of 2021 Indonesian Draft Civil Procedure Law" studies general officials' limitations in Indonesia related to arrest procedures as defined in Article 1 Number 20 of the 2021 Indonesian Draft Civil Procedure Law. The study explores these limitations, which encompass concerns regarding human rights violations and a lack of training and information for investigator officials. The paper also highlights the theoretical and practical implications of the research, emphasizing the importance of addressing these limitations for the legal system's integrity and individual rights protection. Here's a critical review of the paper:

1. The paper is generally well-structured and clear in its presentation of the research topic, objectives, and methods. It should also provide essential context about the role of law enforcement officials and the importance of proper arrest procedures.
2. The paper effectively establishes the relevance of the research by emphasizing the significance of criminal procedure laws in maintaining legal justice in Indonesia. It must also highlight the gaps in existing literature and the practical implications of addressing these limitations.
3. The literature review is quite comprehensive, covering various aspects of criminal procedure, arrest, and detention. However, it's quite lengthy and may benefit from better organization and structure. Consider breaking it down into sub-sections or themes to improve readability.
4. The paper briefly outlines the research methods used, including data collection and analysis. While this provides a general overview, it lacks specific details about the data sources, sample size, and data analysis techniques. Adding more specifics would enhance the paper.
5. The paper mentions an exploratory approach but doesn't elaborate on what this entails. Providing a brief explanation of how this approach was applied and why it was chosen would enhance the paper's clarity.

Reviewer -BDecision: Major revisions required

The manuscript discusses various aspects of arrest and detention procedures in Indonesia, with a focus on their compliance with human rights and legal principles. However, it needs improvement in the following areas.

1. The review cites several relevant studies and sources, which adds credibility to the research. However, there could be more recent sources cited to ensure the information is up-to-date. Additionally, it would be helpful to provide publication dates for these sources to give readers context.
2. Some sentences are lengthy and complex, which may make it challenging for readers to follow. Simplifying sentence structures and eliminating unnecessary repetition can enhance clarity and conciseness.
3. While the paper provides a broad overview of arrest and detention procedures in Indonesia, it's essential to ensure that all the information presented directly relates to the research topic. Some parts of the review seem to drift away from the central theme, such as the discussion of the code of criminal law.
4. The transitions between different sections and sources could be smoother. It's important to guide the reader from one idea or source to the next logically. Consider using transition sentences or phrases to improve the flow of the review.
5. The section briefly introduces the concept of limitations in the implementation of Article 1 Number 20 of the 2021 Indonesian Draft Civil Procedure Law, but it doesn't delve deeply into these limitations. It would be helpful to integrate these findings more comprehensively into the literature review and analyze how these limitations relate to the broader discussion on arrest and detention procedures in Indonesia.

Response to Reviewers

Sr. No.	Reviewer's Comment	Response
	The authors did a good job of revising this paper. Here are some minor suggestions.	Many thanks, Respected Reviewer.
1	The paper includes a few references to past research (e.g., Aldyan & Negi, 2022; Supriyono, Amrullah, & Suarda, 2023), which lends credibility to the study. However, it could benefit from citing more recent research if available.	Many thanks, for kind comments. We have now cited more recent research.
2	The paper should be well-written with correct grammar and sentence structure. It must effectively convey the research's purpose and findings.	Dear reviewer, done as suggested by your kind self.
3	The abstract needs to be concise and to the point, avoiding unnecessary jargon or verbosity.	Dear reviewer, Thank you for your kind suggestions. Done as suggested.
